1. In the neighborhood of Constanta there are three farms newly organized by the Russians as so-called experimental stations; these farms have been taken over in accordance with the agrarian reform law which forbids the ownership by any private person of land larger in area than 22 hectares.
2. In point of fact, the three farms are run on the kholkoz pattern, worked by Soviet citizens and directed by Soviet engineers.
3. The farms have a communal school for children and a motion picture theater.
4. School children from Constanta as well as workers and members of the Communist Party are often taken over these collective farms on propaganda tours.
5. The construction and organization of several new kholkozes has been noted in the Northern Dobruja region.
